

er Connection

Public art will be incorporated in the sidewalk treatment along Lynn and 19th Streets, and also on Lynn Street to the Key Bridge Overlook and on Kent Street to Freedom Park.

These elements were a result of the LukmireGrant study on the esplanade, conducted in the spring of 1999. The study found strong support for and confirmed the benefits of an esplanade in Rosslyn.

But the general design has evolved away from an elevated deck attached to buildings and constructed over Arlington Ridge Road. The esplanade is seen as serving a more fundamental role in defining how the eastern and northeastern faces of Rosslyn should be completed. It also brings pedestrians back onto the core area's street, down from the skywalk system.

LukmireGrant study

In May, 1999, the County had contracted with LukmireGrant Associates to flesh out the concept of the Rosslyn Esplanade as generally defined in the Rosslyn Plan. The goal of the study was "to define the ways in which Rosslyn should meet the river's edge and how an esplanade might contribute to the pedestrian life of Rosslyn."

Some of the resulting goals recommended for the esplanade include:

- Create the Rosslyn esplanade as a pedestrian way connected to Freedom Park and Gateway Park, as well as Key Bridge and the Martha Custis bike path.
- Create pedestrian views from Rosslyn toward the Potomac River, Georgetown and Washington, D.C.
- Allow for pedestrian access to the Potomac River.
- Create the Rosslyn esplanade (ultimately with expanded parkland) as a destination in its own right.
- Generally provide an antidote to Rosslyn's urban density and inward orientation.

The study identified guidelines in the on-going redevelopment of Rosslyn:

- Mitigate or reduce the I-66 impact – visual, auditory and otherwise – on Rosslyn and the riverfront.
- Wherever possible, reinforce the George Washington parkway's historic place as one of the nation's early parkways.
- As the Northern Virginia region's most public connection to the Potomac River, it should be enhanced wherever possible.
- Provide a strong visual terminus for the esplanade at Wilson Boulevard.
- Provide a phased build-out of the esplanade so its construction can be scheduled sequentially with the redevelopment of Rosslyn.

(This report was taken from the Arlington County staff report of July 20, 2000 on Site Plan #25 Site Plan Amendment request.)

Community Benefits Package

The Waterview project was approved under the "C-O Rosslyn" Special Zoning District, which was created by the County Board in 1996. The new district can allow additional density up to 10 FAR and height up to 300 feet (the height of the USA TODAY Tower).

According to Section E of the "C-O Rosslyn" district, "the increases in density and height may be approved when the County Board finds that the development proposal offers important community benefits identified in approved plans for the Rosslyn Area (the Rosslyn Station Area Plan Addendum) and meets other special exception criteria of the Zoning Ordinance (including provision of a Transportation Demand Management Plan to support a higher parking ratio)".

The Waterview project includes a community benefit package valued by the developer and County staff at $11,827,500. The package is comprised of three categories: On-site improvements, Esplanade improvements, and Off-site, Rosslyn-related improvements. They are valued as follows:

Film, Cabaret and Jazz at Rosslyn Spectrum

In partnership with Rosslyn Renaissance and the Arlington County Department of Economic Development, the Arlington Cultural Affairs Division of the Department of Parks, Recreation and Community Resources is augmenting the theatrical offerings at the Rosslyn Spectrum with performing arts and music concerts by nationally known artists.

A CAPPELLA FESTIVAL October 20-21: Arlington's Da Vinci's Notebook hosts fall and spring concerts of A Cappella groups from across the U.S., including NYC's r&b/gospel group Naturally Seven and Florida's Toxic Audio.

HESPERUS Oct 22, Dec 21-23, 2000: An early music chamber ensemble of national acclaim, this Arlington group is heard in the film "Sleepy Hollow"

CABARET FESTIVAL November 17, 2000: A showcase of 10 of the mid-Atlantic's finer cabaret artists from NY to Miami.

MIRI BEN-ARI November 18, 2000: The 29 year-old Israeli jazz violinist was just voted the #2 "Artist on the Rise" in the annual Jazz Poll by prestigious Downbeat magazine.

SPRING EVENTS INCLUDE THE ROSEBUD Film Awards (March 17-18, 2001) and BOBBY SANABRIA (March 10, 2001) a veteran percussionist who The Village Voice calls "the hippest Afro-Cuban jazz band since Cuba's Irakere".

All this in addition to the quality theatrical performances audiences have come to expect at the Rosslyn Spectrum at 1611 North Kent Street. Tickets for these County-sponsored concerts will be available through Tickets.Com (703-218-6500).

For more information, check the Arlington Cultural Affairs Division website at www.arlingtonarts.org, or call 703-228-6960. Ask for the Fall, 2000 issue of the Arlington Artsletter.
